Introduction

This document, as part of Work Package 3: Policy advocacy educational modules and online platform, sets out the basis for an effective implementation of innovative training and educational activities oriented to rural youth.

It provides a single point of reference on the working plan and quality assurance guidelines for partners to ensure high quality trainings, that will be applied throughout the duration of the project and even beyond the project life cycle.

As mentioned in the approved application form<sup>1</sup>, WP3 will enable young people from rural areas to increase their level of participation in the democratic processes and provide all necessary skills in order to make youth organizations in rural areas to be much more active and to establish new youth organizations in rural areas.

In particular, WP3 aims to provide a space for empowered and more inclusive democratic and rural civic youth engagement in multi-levelled decision-making for the future we want to have, by providing the mechanism to engage rural young people in a more structured intersectional cooperation for collective visioning and joint plans and actions towards an inclusive society.

To achieve the abovementioned goals, the following tools and products will be developed as part of WP3:

- Learning materials to be used during the training for young people living in rural areas, thus ensuring Capacity Building and Skills Development of youth in rural areas,
- An online networking platform to establish a network to be run by rural young people from across Europe named "rural youth e-councils,
- The so called "Rural youth e-councils" aiming at supporting young people's active participation and access to decision-making processes by giving them importance to their demands, suggestions, and ideas.

Within these aspects, the desk research on related educational activities (T3.1.) - that will be carried out by ARCES (COO) in cooperation with all Beneficiaries - will be the first and the most important task of WP3.

The goal of this task is to develop an approach to strengthen the link between young people from rural areas and policy makers as well, so that we can find clear solutions to problems.

We want to base our WP3 activities on these three components:

- a) Tools, instruments, policies, projects, initiatives and training courses implemented in each country;
- b) Knowledge acquired through the analysis of training courses and learning materials (if available) covered by other projects or initiatives in the same field;
- c) Experience gained from the partners in this field.

Scope of the Deliverable

The report has been drafted in the framework of the project — Rural Youth Training Activities - RYTA, which is a two-year project funded by the European Union's ERASMUS+ programme.

It is based on the terms and conditions established in the Grant Agreement (GA) and its Annexes, as well as in the Consortium Agreement (CA) specifications and requirements.

RYTA is coordinated by the Institute of Entrepreneurship Development (IED) in Greece and is conducted by a consortium of six partners belonging to Mediterranean Countries (Greece, Italy, Jordan, Lebanon, and Tunisia), including TVETs, Associations, Research institutes, Companies and Trade union organisations.

RYTA's overall goal is strengthening the training capacities of partner organizations targeting young people of rural and remote areas, by providing innovative and digital educational materials and training opportunities focusing on sustainability and environment, also through non-formal learning activities.

The project aims specifically to promote non-formal training activities in the partner countries not associated to the Erasmus + Programme (Jordan, Tunisia, Lebanon) and promote the inclusion of youth population of rural areas in democratic life.

The partnership will develop trainings and mobility activities in third countries not associated to the Programme and thus foster cooperation across different areas of the Mediterranean region.

Finally, the project promotes the EU Youth Strategy (2019-2027)<sup>2</sup> and its 11 goals<sup>3</sup>, specifically referring in goals 2,4,6,9 and 10 (with a primary focus in the goal 6 “Moving Rural Youth Forward<sup>4</sup>” and precisely “Ensuring youth active participation and facilitating equal access in decentralised decision-making process of rural areas”).

The Report is focused on WP3 “Policy advocacy educational modules and online platform” that is led by ARCES Association (Italy). This work package will enable young people from rural areas to increase their level of participation in democratic processes through collective upskilling activities and joint plans, aiming to promote active engagement of youth organizations in rural areas, through the provision of a digital empowerment space and the establishment of an innovative engagement mechanism.

ARCES (IT) coordinates the overall implementation of WP3’s designed activities with the parallel contribution of all partners.

The goal of this Deliverable (D.3.1) is to present existing initiatives on youth engagement in rural activities, such as Programmes, Policies, Projects, Training materials, including, relevant Youth Associations acting at National and European level, that can be the basis for planning a tailored offer of learning materials to be used during the project training courses for young people living in rural areas.

Moreover, the Partners will provide useful and concrete recommendations to improve youth engagement in the rural development process.

Based on the desk research made within this deliverable, the Partners will be more competent to develop innovative training activities with a focus on environment, sustainability, and youth empowerment, by considering some proposed suggestions for the topics that need to be included in the project training courses.

This report is structured in three chapters.

- Chapter 1 presents the “methodology” on how to conduct the research and contribute to elaborate this report;
- Chapter 2 presents “existing initiatives” on youth engagement in rural activities; these initiatives, such as Programmes, Policies, Projects, Training materials or existing Youth Associations acting at National and European level, have been selected by the partners as part of their desk analysis;
- Chapter 3 presents some “recommendations” on how to improve youth engagement.

The conclusion of the report summarizes our findings, describes their importance, and makes some recommendations for further activities in the selected field.

Chapter 1: The methodology on how to conduct the research.

1.1 The desk research process

The desk research is the first and the most important step of Work package 3 "Policy Advocacy educational modules and online platform".

The goal of the desk research is to develop a methodology to identify the right strategic initiatives that will inspire our training courses to be implemented under Work Package 4: "Trainings and Mobility Activities".

It is useful to investigate initiatives that highlight links between rural youth and policy makers, so that proposed solutions will tackle the challenge of active participation of young people in decisions and actions at all levels.

The desk research will be conducted by all Project Partners (PPs) and will be focused on existing programmes, policies, projects at national and European level as well as youth NGOs acting at local and European level.

Studies edited by the European Commission (EC), or by the United Nations Youth Associations (UNYAs), UNESCO, FAO, or other relevant organisations operating in this field will be consulted.

Some suggestions per partner and per category are indicated in the next paragraphs hereafter.

The selection of the data and sources of information to perform enrichment with was a crucial step to improve the quality of the overall research process.

In order to recognise which materials are best suited with the purposes of D3.1 and WP3 in general, it is recommended to follow the following steps:

etc.) and data in terms of topic coverage (e.g., Rural youth inclusion, empowering rural youth, etc.), target group to be reached (e.g., NEETs, learners, vulnerable groups, rural youth), is necessary before selecting an enrichment data.

- Find source data available on the Web. It is recommended selecting datasets available on the Web and track the URL link. Several portals dealing with projects, trainings, policies, reports on youth activities, etc. are available to help partners to source enrichment targets.
- Select the enrichment data from selected sources and then report to the Table. It is recommended selecting datasets available on the Internet after having explored the “State of the art” about existing training materials, projects and policies on youth engagement, and then report to the table below corresponding for each project partner.

Special attention was also given to incorporating the role and effectiveness of youth NGOs operating at National and European level.

1.2 Youth engagement definitions

Several literatures exist that study youth engagement definitions. The World Health Organization (WHO) recognizes the importance of youth engagement in the global health space and encourages young people to get involved in various ways. One effective way to engage young people is to involve them right from the beginning in the events, meetings, activities, etc., organised by youth organizations<sup>8</sup>.

A number of youth engagement definitions in the literature emphasized its participatory and change-causing element.

Checkoway (2011) defined youth engagement as meaningful and sustainable youth involvement in making decisions affecting them.

Forms of youth engagement that reflect its participatory element include volunteerism, participation in community projects visioning and execution, representation in boards and councils, and suggestion of policy options<sup>9</sup>.

In particular, the United Nation defined Youth engagement as: “a process that empowers and enables youth to understand, realise and claim their rights. Participation is a fundamental human right. Meaningfully engaging with youth is a pre-requisite to ensure that young people and their structures can exercise and fulfil this right”<sup>10</sup>.

In the report elaborated by UNESCO (2019)<sup>11</sup> it is also stated that “Youth engagement helps youth develop their agency towards active citizenship and express their voices and ideas. It also encourages youth-to-youth organising and builds the capacities of the structures through which youth engage. Youth engagement contributes to identity-building of youth and to strengthening a number of life skills that are key in all aspects of their lives”.

The UN emphasises the importance of involving young people in the development of national SDG. The abovementioned report indicates that “The Agenda 2030 identifies youth as critical agents of change, with every Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) requiring youth action and participation to succeed. Youth engagement is vital in translating the Agenda into local, national and regional policies, while investing in the engagement of this large demographic group strengthens democracy”<sup>12</sup>.

As we believe on these statements, we built our analysis on a list of selected policies, projects and initiatives that are currently addressing societal needs and challenges, by leveraging on youth roles. Most of the training courses are closely related to the SDGs, such as YouLeaders Capacity-building course<sup>13</sup>.

Chapter 2: Existing policies on youth engagement in rural activities

2.1 Existing policies on youth engagement in rural activities

This section describes existing policies on youth engagement in rural activities. These policies are investigated and mentioned in the table below by each of the project partner (PPs).

Partners explain why the selected Policy (Action Plan, Programme, etc.) is relevant for the purpose of this report and the project RYTA, by indicating the website where they can be found and title of the policy or programme being analysed.

The initiative is promoted by Malik Association which was founded in 2004 with the aim of connecting the island of Sardinia with Africa. The 'Sportello in Spalla' project was developed in cooperation with Eurodesk Italy and Eurobridge and focuses mainly on young people living in small municipalities and rural areas and those who are neither studying nor working (NEET). It aims to disseminate and promote the initiatives that the European Union and the Council of Europe dedicated to young people, with the objective of fostering youth exchanges, education and training among European youth. It also allows the realisation of EU project management. Some of the small and isolated Sardinian municipalities involved in the policy are Austis, Desulo, Fonni, Gavoi, Lodine, Mamoiada, Ollolai, Olzai, Orgosolo, Ovodda, Teti, Tiana, and Tonara.

The policy aims to support young people in the development of initiatives within public spaces in order to provide young people with opportunities and experiences in the social and professional spheres. By doing so, it is possible to foster youth civic participation and inclusion in local communities and to foster their autonomy. The initiative provides public spaces

The allocated funding for the realization of these projects is 761.866.602,09. About half of it is dedicated to small villages with less is dedicated to small villages with less than 5000 inhabitants and it allows the implementation of projects which can boost youth engagement. Through this policy, the NGO TDM 2000 was able to implement projects in Genoni, a Sardinian municipality with about 800 inhabitants and characterized by depopulation. 2 projects of TDM 2000 in Genoni are "Sportello Futuro" and "Officina Europa". The first one aims at promoting and dissemination of information regarding training and volunteering opportunities abroad through programmes of the European Union and other international organisations. "Officina Europa" consists of labs for project management in relation to EU funding to equip young people and NGOs in Genoni with competencies. These skills will be useful in creating EU projects for impacting positively the small town of Genoni.

Chapter 3: Recommendations on how to improve youth engagement in the rural development process

3.1 Concrete proposals on how to improve youth engagement in the rural development process

While it may be considered that a lot has been done in the field of youth engagement and rural youth outreach strategies for vulnerable and marginalised young people (both at the EU and National, Regional/Local level) through programmes, projects and initiatives carried out by public and private organisations, there are still many factors under discussion and many problems to be solved, such as rights disparities between urban and rural youth, geographical isolation and marginalization of the COVID-19 response and recovery in remote rural and peri-urban communities.

The engagement of young people in rural development should be one of the main goals of the current and future policies that create impact across the entire territories of the countries involved in this project, to overcome poverty, while the development strategies of these areas should be based on this goal.

The partners provide the reader with some recommendations based on their findings and experience, including the existing literature, on how to improve youth engagement in the rural development.

They respond to some of the questions and constructive criticism in this paragraph by highlighting, for instance, if some reforms are needed in the current policies and to which extent these measures are able to regulate and stabilize the whole system.

iED Greece

To improve youth engagement in rural development in Greece, the following recommendations can be considered:

- Enhancing Access to Education and Training: Provide quality education and training programs that equip rural youth with the necessary skills and knowledge to actively participate in rural development initiatives.
- Creating Mentorship and Networking Opportunities: Establish mentorship programs where experienced individuals from rural development sectors can guide and support young people in their endeavours. Facilitate networking events, conferences, and workshops that bring together youth, experts, and stakeholders to exchange ideas and build partnerships.
- Encouraging Youth-led Initiatives: Foster an environment that encourages young people to initiate and lead development projects in rural areas. Provide grants, funding, and resources specifically targeted at youth-led initiatives, empowering them to make a tangible impact in their communities.
- Enhancing Digital Infrastructure: Improve internet connectivity and digital infrastructure in rural areas to bridge the digital divide. This will enable youth in remote regions to access online resources, participate in e-learning, and leverage digital tools for entrepreneurship, marketing, and knowledge sharing.
- Engaging Local Authorities and Decision-Makers: Involve local authorities and decision-makers in the design and implementation of policies and programs related to rural development. Ensure that the voices and perspectives of young people are heard and considered in decision-making processes.

By implementing these recommendations, Greece can foster an environment that empowers rural youth to actively contribute to the development of their communities, leading to sustainable growth, poverty reduction, and increased well-being in rural areas.

Reforms in current policies are indeed necessary to address various challenges and improve the stability of the system in Greece. It is essential to ensure that the necessary resources, infrastructure, and mechanisms are in place to effectively implement the proposed reforms. Any reforms should be designed with a long-term perspective, considering both short-term goals and sustainable outcomes. This includes addressing structural issues, promoting transparency, accountability, and creating a favorable environment for economic growth and social development. Also, establishing robust monitoring and evaluation mechanisms, which are absent from many aspects of reformation in Greece, is crucial to assess the impact and effectiveness of reforms. Therefore, they should be implemented through a coordinated approach, involving different sectors and levels of government.

TDM 2000 – Italy

There are several ways youth engagement in rural areas can be improved.

First of all, the presence of youth councils in the rural areas of each municipality is necessary so that young people have an official place where young people can express their ideas and needs and discuss them. These youngsters should also be able to gather in a regional forum to discuss and influence political processes at a regional level.

Another proposal would be to allocate more funds for rural areas; Sardinia and Sicily are for example two Italian regions where youngsters have fewer opportunities as they live on an island and also as there are many undeveloped and disadvantaged areas within these islands. These funds should be dedicated to the creation of public spaces designed to stimulate youth active participation (e.g., squares, small parks, cultural hubs, forums for public debates) and for the delivery of informative campaigns and educational training.

ARCES Association - Italy

In order to provide the reader with ways on how to improve youth engagement in rural areas located away from urban centers, we should first analyse the concept of “Active citizenship”.

There are several definitions of it, as the literature on this topic advance very quickly. Being ARCES an active member of EUCA<sup>21</sup>, here is mentioned the definition given by this very active European University College’s network.

<sup>21</sup> EUCA is the European University College Association. Based in Brussels and formally born in 2008, it represents 53 thousand students and 194 halls of residence in five countries (Belgium, Italy, Poland, Spain and United Kingdom). Its main

Active citizenship means people getting involved in their communities and democracy at all levels from local to national and global. An active citizen promotes the quality of life in a community through both political and non-political process developing a combination of knowledge, skills, values and motivation to work to make a difference in the society. An active citizen promotes the quality of life in a community through both political and non-political process developing a combination of knowledge, skills, values and motivation to work to make a difference in the society<sup>22</sup>.

Having this definition in mind, we can understand that in order to be able to improve youth engagement in the rural development, especially in the Southern part of Italy (Sicily, Calabria, Campania, Sardinia, etc.), there should be first and foremost general youth engagement in active citizenship actions.

Untill today, we believe there is not a mediatic and informative process that include young residents in Sicily in these initiatives or even promote such a model of society as being the best possible, as most of the citizens do not know about any opportunities in their localities. This is due to a poor usage of informative technologies and mass media, that tend to appeal to consumism and algorithm to the corporations and multinationals rather than opportunities for social changes.

Thus, we believe that youth engagement is a consequence of a good communication process of best practices and activities of active citizenship that might guide and orient their interest and decisions properly.

After finding out, through a survery, the best communication channel that young Italians use the most, or consider as the most appropriate for information, local, regional or even national institutions should invest in the promotion of opportunities for male and female youth living in rural area, by using such a channel (e.g., web portals, forums, mobile applications, etc.), alongside a campaign of sensibilization in schools and universities, as most of these scope is the professional, academic, cultural and human development of university students, that share without discrimination active formation and tutoring facilities. More at : <https://www.euca.eu/> organisations have a limited knowledge of opportunities for them and their support for youth civic engagement is very limited. This approach is rather general and as such should be approached by the institutions, involving television journals and other forms of media as well.

After creating a form of youth engagement, we could then redirect that engagement onto the rural development as a form of vocational activity, by equipping the young people from Sicily with the skills to both create their own activity and to work in projects in team.

In addition to improving communication and raising awareness about youth engagement, it is also crucial to create concrete, accessible, and attractive opportunities for young people. This might involve establishing programs that offer hands-on experience, vocational training, or mentorship in the field of rural development. Incentives from the public and private sectors could also be considered to make these opportunities more attractive.

To understand the specific needs and interests of the youth, we should actively seek their inputs and feedbacks. This can be done through surveys, focus groups, or public consultations. By directly involving them in the decision-making process, we can ensure that the programs and opportunities we create genuinely meet their needs and expectations.

After creating an infrastructure model for youth engagement, which includes e-participation tools (e-platforms) to be harnessed for joint strategy development in rural communities, we could then redirect this commitment towards rural development as a form of professional activity.

Moreover, the so called “Smart Villages” are far from being created in our Region and Municipalities. There are communities living in rural areas of our Region (Partinico, Ficcarazzi, Campobello di Mazara, Santa Margherita Belice, Buscemi, Paceco, ecc.) that do not use innovative solutions to improve their resilience or build on local strengths and opportunities. They cannot rely on a participatory approach by mobilising solutions offered by digital technologies, to develop and implement their strategy to improve their economic, social and/or environmental conditions. In fact, such digital platforms do not exist in these areas.

In this context, the question often arising is whether digital technologies can be used not only as a tool for solving specific problems of rural communities, but also for supporting the cooperation of local actors (e.g., mayors and their team, village advisors, village associations, municipal boards or local stakeholder groups including youth) in joint strategy development.

We could create a different context by:

- a) equipping villages leaders and members of local communities with e-participation tools and opportunities they need to contribute effectively to rural development,
- b) defining a comprehensive strategy towards stakeholder participation, by spelling out in advance the responsibilities of any stakeholders who will have a role to play in putting a digital participation process into practice.

PDA – Lebanon

To improve youth engagement in the rural development process in Lebanon, it is crucial to establish an e-platform that fosters dialogue and collaboration among young individuals.

Additionally, offering training courses that equip them with the necessary skills to secure employment will empower them to actively contribute to development initiatives.

Moreover, creating safe and inclusive meeting spaces where youth can openly discuss life issues in a diverse society will facilitate meaningful engagement and enable them to shape their communities positively.

NARC – Jordan

Improving youth engagement in the rural development process in Jordan requires a multi-faceted approach that addresses the unique challenges and opportunities faced by young people in rural areas. Here are some concrete proposals to enhance youth engagement in rural development:

1. Youth-Inclusive Policy Formation: Ensure that youth are actively involved in the formation of rural development policies. Establish youth advisory councils or working groups that provide a platform for young people to voice their opinions, needs, and aspirations. This involvement will ensure that policies consider the perspectives of rural youth and align with their interests.
2. Youth Skills Development and Training: Implement targeted training programs and workshops in rural areas to enhance the entrepreneurial and employability skills of young people. Skills development in areas like agriculture, agribusiness, digital literacy, and sustainable technologies can empower rural youth to take on leadership roles in their communities and contribute to local development.
3. Youth Access to Information and Resources: Facilitate access to information on funding opportunities, development projects, and government initiatives. Establish information centers or online platforms that provide relevant resources to rural youth, enabling them to participate in various development programs.
4. Youth-Led Rural Projects: Encourage and support youth-led development projects in rural areas. Offer grants, mentorship, and technical assistance to young people with innovative ideas for community development, sustainable agriculture, and environmental conservation.
5. Networking and Knowledge Exchange: Create networking opportunities for rural youth to connect with peers, experts, and potential mentors. Facilitate knowledge exchange between rural communities and urban centers to promote learning and collaboration.
6. Youth Participation in Cooperatives: Promote the establishment of youth-led agricultural and rural cooperatives. These cooperatives can enable young people to collectively address challenges, share resources, and access markets more effectively.
7. Mobile Technology and Digital Platforms: Utilize mobile technology and digital platforms to engage rural youth in community development efforts. Mobile apps and online platforms can be used for information dissemination, training, and communication.
8. Youth-Friendly Financial Services: Advocate for youth-friendly financial services that cater to the specific needs of young people in rural areas.

Access to affordable credit and financial literacy training can support youth entrepreneurship and income-generating activities.

9. Recognition and Awards: Recognize and celebrate successful youth-led initiatives and innovations in rural development. Publicly acknowledge young change-makers to inspire and motivate others.
10. Capacity Building for Local Authorities: Provide capacity building and sensitization workshops for local authorities on the importance of youth engagement in rural development. Encourage local leaders to create an enabling environment for youth participation and support youth-led initiatives.
11. Promote Gender Equality: Ensure gender equality and inclusivity in all youth engagement efforts. Encourage the participation of young women in rural development processes and address gender-specific challenges they may face.
12. Collaboration with NGOs and International Organizations: Partner with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and international organizations working on rural development to leverage their expertise, resources, and networks in supporting youth initiatives.

Implementing these proposals requires collaborative efforts from the government, civil society including Youth associations, private sector, and development partners to create an enabling environment for youth engagement in rural development in Jordan. Continuous evaluation and adaptation of strategies will be essential to ensure the sustained impact of these initiatives.

Youth associations play a crucial role in promoting youth civic engagement in Jordan, both at the country level and in cooperation with European partners. These associations provide young people with platforms to participate in community development, social activism, and decision-making processes. Here are some ways youth associations can contribute to promoting youth civic engagement in Jordan:

- Advocacy and Awareness: Youth associations often advocate for youth rights and represent the interests of young people in various social, economic, and political issues. They raise awareness about important topics affecting the youth community and promote discussions around them.

- Empowerment and Capacity Building: Youth associations offer workshops, training programs, and educational opportunities to empower young individuals, enhancing their leadership skills, public speaking abilities, and civic knowledge. This empowerment enables them to actively engage in their communities and take on active roles in addressing challenges.
- Community Service and Volunteering: Many youth associations in Jordan organize community service and volunteering initiatives, encouraging young people to give back to their communities. This involvement fosters a sense of responsibility and civic duty among the youth.
- Youth-Led Projects and Initiatives: Youth associations often initiate and implement projects that target community development, social inclusion, and environmental sustainability. This hands-on involvement in project planning and execution gives young people practical experience in civic engagement.
- Policy Advocacy and Participation: Some youth associations engage in policy advocacy and participate in decision-making processes related to youth-related issues at the local, regional, and national levels. They act as a voice for young people, ensuring their concerns and perspectives are considered in policy discussions.
- International Cooperation and Exchange: Youth associations in Jordan may collaborate with European youth organizations through programs like Erasmus+ and ENI CBC MED, fostering intercultural exchange and cross-border cooperation. This engagement broadens the horizons of young Jordanians and exposes them to diverse perspectives and experiences.
- Youth Forums and Dialogues: Youth associations organize forums and dialogues that bring young people together to discuss matters of concern, share ideas, and propose solutions for societal challenges. These platforms encourage open dialogue and democratic participation.
- Effectiveness of Youth Associations in Promoting Youth Civic Engagement in Jordan:

The effectiveness of youth associations in promoting youth civic engagement in Jordan can be measured by several factors:

1. Youth Participation: The level of youth engagement and participation in community activities, projects, and decision-making processes indicates the effectiveness of youth associations in mobilizing young people.

2. Impact on Policy Change: Successful policy advocacy and tangible changes in youth-related policies and programs demonstrate the influence of youth associations in the decision-making process.
3. Community Impact: The impact of youth-led projects and initiatives on local communities is an essential indicator of the effectiveness of youth associations in addressing societal challenges.
4. Skills Development: The acquisition of leadership, teamwork, and communication skills by young individuals through their involvement in youth associations is a positive outcome of effective engagement.
5. Inclusivity and Representation: Effective youth associations strive to be inclusive, representing the diverse voices and perspectives of young people in the community.
6. International Collaboration: The ability of youth associations to collaborate with European partners and engage in cross-border initiatives demonstrates their effectiveness in fostering international cooperation and intercultural dialogue.

It's important to recognize that the effectiveness of youth associations may vary based on their organizational structure, funding support, and the level of collaboration with government and non-governmental stakeholders. Continuous evaluation, capacity building, and sustained efforts to address the evolving needs of young people are essential to ensuring the long-term impact of youth associations in promoting youth civic engagement in Jordan.

UTAP – Tunisia

All the following recommendations are based on benchmarks from UTAP staff members. In order to ensure more active engagement from Tunisian youth living in rural areas the following goals should be promoted:

- a. Strengthening access to appropriate education and training that equips young people with the skills to live and work productively in rural areas.
- b. Providing career counselling to young rural people at an early age to inform them about job prospects in their region, as well as the technical and personal skills needed for these jobs. Also, help them access training and other services to boost their productivity, without having to interrupt their jobs.

- c. Supporting youth entrepreneurship through access to credit, land, and other business development services.
- d. Strengthening investment in agricultural and non-agricultural activities, as well as in social and economic activities in order to offer young people job prospects and attractive living conditions.
- e. Developing integrated approaches to youth employment in rural areas, which include measures to increase job opportunities and quality, and to improve living conditions.
- f. Guaranteeing the equitable representation of young people in public institutions so that public decisions consider their realities and perspectives, that political choices are based on a variety of experiences, skills, and points of view, and finally, that public policy outcomes meet their needs and concerns.

The Tunisian Government could consider implementing innovative measures to facilitate young people's access to conventional political structures that already exist and to remobilise them: firstly, the rules for registration on electoral lists sometimes represent a considerable obstacle to participation in elections, especially for new voters, who are more likely to change residence at a transitional moment in their lives.

To this end, we should strengthen the principle of “open government” as a lever for youth participation: indeed, open government tends to strengthen the effectiveness and accountability of modes of public governance. It promotes the transparency of public action and its openness to new forms of consultation and citizen participation. Open government initiatives and strategies therefore represent an important opportunity to strengthen the participation of citizens in public life, and more particularly of young people.

We should also strengthen the access to information and adopt public communication adapted to young people: access to information for all citizens and the establishment of appropriate public communication are essential prerequisites for better participation in the cycle public policies and improving informed engagement in public life.

They are particularly important for young people: by having access to complete, objective, clear, reliable information, and communicated in a manner adapted to their needs and expectations, they find themselves in a position to play a more active role in life and public debate as well as in the preparation, adoption, and monitoring of public policies.

Moreover, public communication should be specifically adapted to young people: another fundamental element of the participation of young people is the use of communication adapted to their needs and characteristics both to provide them with relevant information, to interact effectively with them, and to contribute to their greatest involvement in public life. In this sense, communication that would consider the media consumption habits of young people would promote their participation in public life. Additionally, traditional approaches such as roundtables and advisory services would complement more innovative forms of engagement, especially in remote rural areas and marginalized urban areas where young people may not be regular Internet users.

Last but not least, we should develop and enhance existing ad hoc participation mechanisms: many mechanisms specially designed for youth participation, particularly at local level, exist today in Tunisia, such as, pilot local youth councils. The participation of young people in decisions and debates in public life needs to be organised sustainable and accessible to as many people as possible.

Finally, we should foster youth participation at the sub-national level: youth access to these local participation mechanisms gives them the opportunity to engage directly with policy makers, which remains rare at the highest levels of government.

Conclusions

The conclusion of the report summarizes our findings, describe their importance, and make recommendations for further activities in the selected field based on the benchmarking outcomes.

The central idea from all partners is the importance of youth engagement in rural development as a Strategy to combat poverty and stabilize systems.

To achieve this, several interconnected strategies are proposed by all Partners:

1. Education and Training: Enhance access to quality education and training programs that equip rural youth with necessary skills.
2. Mentorship and Networking: Foster mentorship programs and networking events to exchange ideas and build partnerships.
3. Youth-led Initiatives: Encourage youth-led initiatives through targeted resources, grants, and funding.
4. Digital Infrastructure: Improve digital infrastructure to bridge the gap in remote areas, facilitating access to online resources.
5. E-participation tools: Offer the possibility to participate in collective consultation processes independent of time and space constraints.
6. Active Citizenship: Promote a model of society where young people are involved in their communities and in democratic processes, aided by effective communication strategies.
7. Policy-making Involvement: Involve youth in decision-making processes, possibly through the establishment of youth councils.
8. Increased Funding: Increase funding for rural areas, particularly for the creation of public spaces that stimulate active participation and for delivering informative campaigns.
9. Enabling Environment: Create safe spaces for engagement, provide youth-friendly financial services, and offer capacity-building opportunities.
10. Recognition: Celebrate successful youth-led initiatives in rural development to motivate and inspire others.

11. Collaboration: Collaborate with NGOs, international organizations, and government sectors to support youth initiatives and ensure effective implementation of proposed reforms.

All these strategies, when combined, create a holistic and integrated approach towards improving youth engagement in rural development.
