E-MEETINGS

The RYTA project's e-meetings are pivotal in fostering dialogue and collaboration among young people from rural areas across Europe and beyond. These e-meetings serve as a platform for young people to share their experiences, challenges, and innovative ideas on addressing rural issues through civic engagement and active participation. The agenda will focus on discussing everyday challenges, exploring potential solutions, and building a collective approach to rural youth development.

INTEGRATING YOUTH INTO POLITICS

The RYTA project's initiative to integrate youth into politics is designed to bridge the gap between rural youth and policymakers. Each e-meeting will feature a discussion between a rural youth representative, a local youth organization or association member, and a policymaker at the local, regional, or national level. These discussions will focus on the unique challenges faced by rural youth and explore potential policy solutions to address them. By facilitating these debates, the project aims to enhance the connection between young people and decision-makers, promoting active youth participation in the political process.

Our Key Objectives

Facilitate e-meetings for rural youth from different countries to discuss challenges, share experiences, and explore innovative solutions.

Generate new projects and collaborations through e-meetings to drive positive change in rural communities, documenting outcomes for ongoing learning.

Encourage rural youth to actively engage in civic activities and youth organizations, strengthening their involvement in community development and decision-making processes.

Organize e-meetings with policymakers to address rural youth challenges and integrate their perspectives into policy discussions, enhancing the connection between young people and decision-makers.
